1.e4 e6 2.Nc3 Bb4 3.Nge2 d5 4.f3? Bc6 17.Bg2 Na6 [Heading for c5 and eventually the hole at d3. White's best plan would appear to be 18. Ke2, followed by Rd1 centralizing his rook on the open file to counter Black's Rook and with a possible cheap last rank mate , if Black is not careful.] 18.Ng4?? [When behind in material, one never wants to exchange. the N was White's most active piece being centralized at e3.] 18...Nxc4 19.fxg4 Nc5 20.Re1 Rd8+ 21.Kc2 h6 [Creating a luft to prevent a potential cheap back rank mate.] 22.g5 hxg5 23.Bxg5 f6 24.Be3! [A good choice, kind of forcing the issue, because of the threat of the fork at b6.] 24...b6 25.Bh1?? [Far better is 25. Bf2 returning protection on the e-pawn or even Bxc5 getting rid of the pesky N. Taking the N permits White to protect his hanging a-pawn.] 25...Rxa3 [The beginning of the end...this was a crucial error, because it now ensures Black will penetrate the position via the a file.] 26.Bd2 Ra2+ 27.Rb2 Rxb2+ 28.Kxb2 Rxd2+ [This combination seals White's fate. 2013 PHCC Championships Port Huron , MI (3), 31.01.2013/[Lon Rutkofske]

1.e4 d6 2.d4 Nf6 [I decided after quite some serious study, that I didn't want to get into the Winawer variation of the French Defense. I knew that Dave had been studying up on this line for quite some time of late, and wanted to make this a contest of strength vs. strength, rather than memorization. I perused the Petrov, rethought the Ruy, pondered the Philidor, schemed the Schliemann, studied the Scandinavian and cogitated the Caro...all in an effort to take Dave out of his comfort zone...and I guess mine as well. It was out of respect for Dave's determination, persistence and preparation that I chose the Pirc. Since I played the KI-Attack often, I assayed this opening because of their similarities, despite being down a tempo. I even looked at several responses to 1.d4, thinking he might opt for something totally different, just to out-psyche me!] 3.Nc3 g6 4.h3 Bg7 5.Nf3 0-0 6.Bc4 c6 7.0-0 b5 8.Bd3 Na6 9.e5 [A pretty strong move, and one I didn't anticipate this early. I chose e8 rather than d7 because I felt after 9...Nd7 10.e6 opened things up too much for my taste, and would liberate White's forces in an attack on my K.] 9...Ne8 10.Ne2 Diagram

[This I couldn't understand. White has declared his intention to pawn storm the center, so this move is anti-positional. Better here would have been the natural 10.d5! exploding the central squares, and taking White's spacial advantage to the next phase. With only a single piece beyond his third rank, Black is in no position to challenge White's plan. Additionally, the QN belongs at e4 where it exerts maximum pressure on the K-side and increases space for White's pieces. One of the major shortcomings of the Pirc is that is passive initially, and requires a great counter-attack to make it effective.] 10...Nb4 11.Be4 [As you can see, White's 10th move prevents Be2, has decentralized the QN and locks up the position, which begins to negate White's spacial advantage. Although it does force Black to give up his only developed piece, and in closed positions, the Knights are generally more valuable.] 11...d5 12.Bd3 Nc7 13.c3 Nxd3 14.Qxd3 a5 15.Bd2 Diagram

[Positionally, White has the superior game, and I am desperately trying to untangle my pieces and mount a counter-offensive. Here, something simple like Nh2, or even Nh4 followed by f4! looks like a spectacular plan, since Black is relatively impotent.] 15...Bf5? [Black is desperate for counter-play, and the text actually helps move the White Q to a better square.] 16.Qe3 Qc8? [A clear sign of desperation, looking at a possible sac at h3...but there is not going to be adequate compensation for this. Just the simple Nh2 helps White because it threatens a K-side pawn storm with g4...Ng3 followed quickly with f4!] 17.Ng3? Bd7 18.Rfe1? [Wrong R!...it should be obvious that

White needs to proceed with a K-side assault. After this move, it became very clear to me that Dave was just reacting to my threats..if you could call them threats...and that he had no real plan of his own. He seemed to have no real idea of how to get his K-side attack rolling, preferring to sit back, and let me dictate the action...or for my part..inaction! So, finally I decided to try something bold and saw a possible break along the c-file. I planned to sink my Knight into c4 then push along the a and b files in order to break, and hopefully catch Dave with all of his pieces on the K-side. After 18...Ra6...I also had possible defensive options along my 3rd rank.] 18...Ra6 Diagram

[With all of the spacial advantage on White's side, why would Dave open up the game on the Q-side without considering the powerful f4! Black's pawn structure is horribly backward, and to open up any uncontested file is not what White should be doing without preparing fully with something like f4! ...Nf3 and shifting the KR to the Q-side.] 27...axb4 28.axb4? [It is best to open up the c-file because Nb3 then to c5 is potentially stronger than Black's N to c4.] 28...Ra7 29.Nb3 Qc7 30.Nc5 Rfa8 31.Nxd7?! Diagram

[A critical error. 31.e3!!! is a killer move for White, prying open the e-file for White's battery. If 31...Be8 32. ef+ Bf7 33.Ne6 creates some serious difficulty for Black.] 31...Qxd7 32.Nf1 Qf5 33.Nd2 [The only move...only reinforces the principles of centralization of the ones pieces. Had the N remained at g3, this trap would have been avoided and White would have maintained his advantage. Now that the Black Q has some breathing space, and doubled rooks along the a-file, the tide turns rapidly!

33...Nc4 34.g4 Qc2 35.Nxc4 Qxb1 36.Na5 Diagram

Perhaps best was the simplifying 36...Ra5 37. ba5, Ra5 38.Rb2, Qe4 39.Qe4, de4 40.Bd2 holding on the pawn advantage...but I thought I could weasel out of this trap.]

Since the Pirc is a rather passive opening, it is essential that Black look for opportunities to counter-attack.
